Without changing, there is no point in checking.”

Enlightenment is that state of awareness in which one sees the true nature of things, which enables one to understand why things are the way they are and respond appropriately. Now, perhaps more than at any other time, the world needs enlightened decisions to deal with the myriad problems confronting humankind.

Intelligence, unless it is guided by spiritual insight can create problems instead of solving them because intelligence is not necessarily accompanied by virtues that constitute wisdom. Hence, intelligent decisions can be short-sighted or guided by selfish motives.

But enlightened living need not be difficult. All it requires is a genuine spiritual effort. When there is honest introspection, a realisation that one needs to change, and where there is the will to effect that change, one is already on the way to success.
